“State Telehealth Policy Landscape: 2024 Developments”

Join us to learn about timely state legislative activity related to telemedicine across the country and the policy changes we can expect coming out of state legislatures this year.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- Understand state legislators' and regulators' current priorities and key telehealth policy trends
- Review key proposals around telehealth practice standards, payment policies, cross-state licensure, and new funding mechanisms for telehealth
- Recognize how states approaching the remote prescribing of controlled substances
- Explore the political challenges around new proposals to streamline interstate care
- Discuss how evolving policies around data privacy and AI intersect with telemedicine

PRESENTER

Quinn Shean is healthcare strategist and regulatory advisor who works with clients at the intersection of law, policy, and politics. She serves as a strategic policy advisor to the American Telemedicine Association, a number of healthcare entities, and Tusk Venture Partners, the first venture capital fund and political strategy firm dedicated to working with and investing in startups operating in regulated industries. She also served as the Vice-Chair of the committee that drafted the Uniform Telehealth Act.
